VERY BAD MANNERS.

BECAUSE ITS ENGLISH YOU KNOW.

The Corrupt, Rude and Victors Ways Imported Into Society by Anglophobist Copylsts-Some Cases in Point.

[Correspondence of The Indianapolis News.]
WASHINGTON, November 14.—The craze for English-you-know seems to rage here this season with additional violence. A few years ago you could tell an American on the streets of the National Capital as far as you vincial in his costume and walk, but he was after all a distinct type compared with the foreign article of manhood. You can never tell now by the clothes a man wears or by his gait, or even by his speech, whether he is a recent importation or to the manor born. A couple of years ago these society swells were called "dudes," a designation covering ultra shionable men, but to-day they are entirely too numerous to be rated eccentric and at this rate the eccentric people will soon be those who differ from them in personal appearance. They already begin to permeate every grade of society. In fact, the lower you go the more marked the copy.

I suppose it will soon spread westward and in a couple of years you will begin to see how much you have missed by having been born an American. We have to take changes of fashion as they come, and and kindred ailments. Unfortunately the English matrix from which our fashionable society gets its impressions is not always the perfect thing. I say it with fear and trem-bling that the most rude manners and corrupt bling that the most rude manners and corrupt principles and vicious habits of life are car-ried about not concealed under these clothes. With the outward model alone the young people of America would not suffer. A change from "peg-top" pantaloons to "spring-bottoms" has no effect on a man's moral nature. But our American copyists not only ape foreign dress, but foreign manners, and not only foreign manners, but tastes and habits. I do not say that all, or even a majority, of foreigners are rude, corrupt and vicious. It is that class which our society

One of the peculiarities of our good society is, I have observed, a total disregard of the presence or rights of others. Anywhere in Washington in public places you will see that calm superiority which ignores surroundings. At the theater the gentlemen and the ladies may be distinguished by their loud and ant talk and laughter. In the street cars it is the same way. Open criticism of others present is usually the only recognition of the existence of others. Conversation is carried on just as you and two or three companions might carry it on by yourselves in a private room or on the sidewalk. That it No attention whatever is paid by good society to who anybody else is or what he may think. Intolerable, do you say? Yes, it seems so, but you get used to it. My own rule to measure gentleman or lady, namely, a proper and aonest consideration for other people, has been seriously strained a few times and I now put brains into anybody's head or reform the whole world. One evening last season I was at the opera with my wife and she became very much annoyed by the loud gossip and chatter of a brace of good society behind us. We stood it for some time when I finally turned to the Anglo-American gentleman in the gentleman leaned forward and replied in a low but angry tone: "We have the same rights here you have; it is none of your busi-you annoy me," I replied.

"I will see you again, sir; there are ladies present." And fumbling nervously in his pocket he produced a card which he passed over my sh ulder. It was that of an attache ot one of the foreign legations. It was a most ridiculous proceeding, but I was not going to be outdone in politeness and im-mediately fished out one of my own and passed it over. The name of a metropolitan journal was in the corner.

"I know you," said he, "and I will see you after the performance."

"I don't know you, but I know the mother of the young lady you are with and know yours either. As for you, sir, I will see you any time you wish, and if you annoy my lady and myself any more during this pertime you wish, and if you annoy my

Both of us were angry, though the alter-eation could scarcely have been heard except in the immediate vicinity, where there was a general air of satisfaction at the e you will see me before it is over.' the gentlemen with their ladies got up and left the house or removed to another part of the theater. Of course I never heard from the young gentleman. I have met the young lady frequently, and have reason to believe I have cured her of a very bad habit.

A good story is being quietly told about town further illustrative of my text. There is a great demand for persons connected with is a great demand for persons connected with the foreign legations. They are invited everywhere. Young attaches who could not get inside of a fashionable door in London, Paris, Berlin or the city from whence they came, are here lionized to a degree that makes their head swim. They are naturally delighted with America and float along on the surface of the fashionable current of Washington as big as Newtown pippins.

Some of these fellows actually live on their invitations to dinner, only paying for the breakfasts at some cafe. Well, the story goes that one of them was asked to dinner by a family the heads of which were total goes that one of them was asked to dinner by a family the heads of which were total strangers to him. He knew that invitations had been extended to others of his set who had declined, so he was quite certain it was not his person that was wanted. Meeting another young fellow, the latter suggested that an experiment be tried.

"Give it to your valet," said his merry friend. "I'll wager they will never discover the difference; he's such a bloody Englishman. They don't know you. All they want is somebody there, you know. By Jove! What a lark."

"I'll do it," said the other. And he did. Instruction his valet, who is fully as polite and genteel-looking as his master, the latter posted him off to the residence at the proper hour in the legation carriage.

What transpired there may be imagined from the fact that among the dinner guests given in the society papers was the name of the young Secretary, and from the account of the affair which has leaked out through other servants to whom the valet confided the story, it would seem from the latter that the valet got along very well until the wine hean coming around to him too frequently. He knew all about his master's affairs, and discoursed on diplomatic matters with exceeding volubility. As he got mellow, however, his dignity gave way and his gossip became that interesting stuff retailed by aervants below stairs. To anybody who had been accustomed to move in diplomatic society his talk would have betrayed the real mate of the case; but the parvenues who state of the case; but the parvenues who were entertaining him were ignorant and accepted his vulgarity as the eccentricity of foreigners. They piled every courtesy upon the valet until he could no longer bear them; but was finally interrupted in the act of making love to one of the ladies of the house, put into his carriage quietly and sent home. To the credit of the family may it be added that the young Secretary never got INDIANA AFFAIRS.

The Anglo-mania for house-servants and coachmen is progressing with the rage for other things. A livery man tells me there is more money spent here for carriages, coachmen, footmen and liveries, in proportion to the population, twice over than in any other city in the Union. He pow keeps with the contract of the population of the popu city in the Union. He now keeps private carriages with a special coachman each for hire to families. Such an establishment brings from eight to ten dollars 4 day whether in use or not and the contract extends through the season. Thus a family supports through the season. Thus a family supports an elegant private turnout without owning as much as a horse-blanket. What economy is there in this? Well, such a turn-out costs from $1,500 to $3,000. A coachman well liveried and of approved pattern costs fifty dollars a month and keeping one or two horses from twenty-five dollars to fifty dollars a month. With a modest one-horse coupe the plant would be say $1,500 at the very lowest coachman and keep through season. lowest, coachman and keep through season of four months would be $300 more, or $1,800. The same kind of a turn-out can be had at $8 a day for about $900, and no risk or responsibility. The affair could not be sold in the spring for the difference. A real bang-up turn-out, however, will cost originally double that, or $5,000. Senators and others who merely spend the winter season here find it more economical to hire. In this case the team is nomical to hire. In this case the team is always in their service, day and evening, and is called by telephone for the Capitol, for the theater, for church, or shopping. The uninitiated would hardly understand how anybody could get $10 a day value out of a carriage, unless it was to sell patent medicine on the street corners or to deliver letters. They don't comprehend the tinsil and sawdust of the American Paris.

Washington is pre-eminently a carriage city. Its splendid streets and beautiful parks city. Its splendid streets and beautiful parks and the great distances between points of interests and business makes a carriage both a luxury and a necessity. It is inhabitated by a carriage people, wealthy and lazy and the official and energetic. On swell occasions at the theater or at private houses you will see a perfect jam of carriages and a sidewalk thronged with liveried fluukies. I remember being in Philadelphia once with my wife during the winter season. We went to the Academy of Music at night to hear grand ber being in Philadelphia once with my wife during the winter season. We went to the Academy of Music at night to hear grand opera. There was an immense audience and apparently the flower of the Quaker City. When we came out but a single, lonely-looking carriage was in waiting and that was mine, ordered from my hotel. I was almost ashamed to get into it, the people stared so at us. The opera nights in was almost assaulted to get into it, the people stared so at us. The opera nights in Washington bring out hundreds of carriages and a multitude of cabs and hansoms, and the audience departs in a pandemonium of sounds. Policemen flank the curbs and act shouts it out at the top at his voice; another policeman farther up among the maze of wheels repeats it, and perhaps one or two coachmen re-echo it. You see far up the streets the glancing double-lamps of an hundred vehicles, and of these your particular pair rapidly disentangles and dashes up to the front. In the meantime the police have abouted and very delayer the laws the laws abouted and very delayer the laws. have shouted and passed along the line other names, and as fast as they are called the carringes are permitted to leave their stand and come down to the front. While there is great confusion of sounds there is no confusion about getting your carriage. Those who linger on the block can at the same time get a list of the society people who are in attendance, and right here is where the society reporter gets in his evening's work. WHISPERS OF THE WIRES.

Wire Fences Must Go. OMAHA, Neb., November 17.—The decision of Justice Miller, of the United States Supreme Court, in the Brighton ranch case, has just been received in Omaha. It sustain the mandatory injunction of the United States District Court for the present and future. The Brighton Company had fenced in 52,000 acres of Government land in Custer county with fifty—ven miles of wire fence. Proceedings were begin some time ago to com-pel the company to remove the fence, and pel the company to remove the fence, and they fought desperately, carrying the case to the Supreme Court, in which they have been defeated. Justice Miller's decision settles all doubtful points on the question of fencing the public domain, and this case will be used as a precedent in similar suits wheneve any are brought. The Brighton Company will have to immediately remove the fences.

Prosecution Owing to Missing Ballots.

Tom Cottrell lodged information last evening in the Criminal Court against George W. Hill, inspector, and Charley Smith, charging them with purloining and destroying the ballots in the First precinct, Eighteenth ward, on election day, and they were placed under bonds of $1,000 each. The absence of the ballots was discovered during the recount and while the precinct gave Cot trell a handsome majority, he claims he would have gained fifteen or twenty more if the commissioners had had a chance at them. Claim was made at that time that the ballots were taken by Smith, who car-ried them to Ph. Wolfe's cigar store, and ing which Smith entered a denial and Mr. Hill pleaded entire ignorance. Both the accused were in court to-day, demanding a speedy trial. There was an attempt at the last meeting of the grand jury to indict Mr. Smith, but is failed, and since the adjournment there have been rumors in effect that the republicans threatened, if the democracy attempted to prosecute Smith, that Commissioner Holt would also have to dance to the music. So far however, no republican Commissioner Holt would also have to dance to the music. So far, however, no republican has volunteered to bring Holt to the front, neither does the prosecutor know of any able-bodied radical patriot willing to assume the responsibility. the responsibility.

A strange elonement was made public toson of John W. Dawson, a pioneer, living four miles south of the city, with his father's wife. The couple left home last Friday evening, but gossip will have it that they did not leave this city until last even-ing, taking with them weighty bag-gage, which had been left some days previous at Strangmeyer's, on Shelby street. Mr. Dawson, Sr., has lived on the old farm nearly half a century, and the fugitive woman is his fourth wife. She came to the family about six years ago, on the recommendation of the management of the Home for Friendless Women, and was employed as a domestic, doing her work faithfully and proving very serviceable. At that time she was accompanied by her illegitimate child, and about six months after her introduction into the honsemonths after her introduction into the household the family were shocked to know that she was their father's promised wife, and this led to a breaking up of the old circle, this led to a breaking up of the old circle, the children going elsewhere. The records show that the woman was married under the name of Kate Messersmith, October 21, 1879, she at that time being about twenty-five years of age, while the venerable groom was nearer seventy than sixty years of age. A year later a son was born, as the fruit of the union, and the family became somewhat reconciled, more particularly the boys, and the old-time relations were, in a measure, resumed. The first to accept the situation was Oscar, who is a bachelor of about the same age of his is a bachelor of about the same age of his step-mother, and nearly four years ago he returned home, and since that time he has remained upon the farm. Just when the intimacy began, that has led to the disgrace and humiliation of the parent is unknown, but a brother residto ing in this city had his suspicion aroused over a year ago, and he used all his influence to persuade Oscar to leave, but without avail. From what can be learned, the erring couple made careful preparations for flight, and it is believed they carried away considerable money. Their destination is un-known. Little is known of the antece-dents of the woman, save that she hails from somewhere near Lawrenceburg, and that she claimed to have been betrayed under a promise of marriage by a cigar maker of this city. In her flight she abandoned both her children. Mr. Dawson is nearly wild with shame and mortification, but it is the understand-ing he will make no pursuit, and will take-the earliest opportunity in the courts to rid himself of a wife evidently unworthy the name. Oscar is described as a man of not much force of character, somewhat dissi-pated, and easily influenced, and in this escapade it is believed his step-mother was the governing force.

CANON FARRAR ON DANTE.

The Highest Among the Religious Poets

-Stay of the Distinguished Arch-deacon in Indianapolis.

Canon Farrar, Archdeacon of Westminster, came to Indianapolis from Chicago yesterday afternoon, and was received by Dr. Joseph S. Jencks and Dr. James Mo Leod. He was entertained at the latter's residence, and at 6 o'clock dined with number of invited guests. At 8 o'clock he appeared before a large audience at Plymouth Church, representing the intelligence and culture of Indianapolis and surrounding towns. His figure is clerical and English, though he might be mistaken for an American clergyman. He was introduced to the audience by Dr. McLeod, and after remarking that he was "destitute of any powers of oratory, and had absolutely no training in elecution," the distinguished gentleman at once turned his attention to the theme of his lecture,

It was in the speaker's pronunciation that his English was most apparent. His "brogue" was, by no means, so pronounced as Matthew Arnold's was observed to be from the same platform some months ago, yet it was so apparent that many repeated the query of the critic who asked, "Why is it that the English can't speak English?" As to his oratory, it was pleasing though not pretentious. His left arm was held akimbo, and his right hand twisted nervously at times, but these were unobserved or forgotten because of the force and eloquence of his diction.

"If is because Dante seems peculiarly fitted to teach and elevate this age," he said, "and make it blush for its own favorite vices that I have asked you to listen while I speak. If any young men are in my audience, I invite them to hold high a perpetual companionship with such souls as this, and it there are those who have found delight in meaner things, I would hope by taking to the study of Dante they might be induced to turn away from such follies and breathe the pure air of the sgreat and immortal poet."

The lecturer gave Dante the highest rank as a religious poet, and said that nations as a religious poet, and said that nations which had such poets as Milton and Dante should never degenerate. Gladstone (at the mention, of whose name the audience applauded), who was England's Premier and mention of whose name the audience applicated), who was England's Premier and who may be again, drew sustenance and faith and power from these poets. Dante's life had four epochs—love, philosophy, politics and exile. Rapidly sketching the first three, he spld the story of his exile from Florence, and said.

"He was doomed, in nineteen years of hopeless wandering and galling dependence, to learn how hard a pace it is to tread a patron's stair. Cut off from returning to Florence, he died at Ravenna, at the age of fifty-six, of a broken heart. A century later Florence, with a remorse too late, begged that the remains of Dante might be restored to her, but though that request was renewed at a later period by two persons no less than Leo X, and Michael Angelo, it was justify refused. There in Ravenna the dust of Dante sleeps until the judgment day. Those pine woods were green then, though blighted now; and Dante's life, though blighted then, has put forth the brightest leaves for us. What he learned in suffering he taught in song. But for that despair of heart he might have been a graceful love poet, a scholastic philosopher; but he never would have written the Divine Comedy. God dipped his morsel in vinegar, and gave him to drink. But his loss is our gain. As in the case of many other poets, the gold was purged through affliction of all its dross, and molded into forms of eternal lovelines."

The Divine Comedy was called comedy because it ends pleasantly. It is divided into three books, "Hell," "Purgatory" and "Paradise." The three were rapidly reviewed, the horrors of hell, the expiation of purgatory, as Dante in imagination, accompanied by Virgil, saw them, were pictured to the audience. Passing to Paradise, the speaker said:

"Paradise is the least read by the multitude of three poems, but to the student it is the dear-"Paradise is the least read by the multitude of the three peams, but to the student it is the dear-est of all. If one would feel the magic influence of the poem one must bathe in light, one must clothe in light, you must be children of the light, one must gaze on the light as with the eagle's undazzied eye. For here Dante leaves earth en-tirely behind him. Dante at last is suffered to-gaze for one instaint upon the supermal glory of God, the Trinity in Unity, seeing as in one das-ging fleat, which make he works.

gaze for one instant upon the supernal glory of God, the Trintty in Unity, seeing as in one das-zling flam, which melts his memory as the sunlight melts the snow, the terrible orb of three different colors in which the one seems to reflect the other. Speech fails. The waxen wings of poetry are melsed and drop useless. "Dante's vision is a faithful allegory of a spiritual torment certain to. Be visited on all those who forsake God's law. The object is to hold up before men the purity of God's moral government; to arouse them to a sense of the mystery of their state; to point to them the beauty of the Christian temper. He does not mean to describe a kind of hell in which all mankind has ceased to believe as a reality, but to give the full verify of a moral hell. His subject is not so much the state of souls after death as that man is rendering himself litable by the exercise of free will to the rewards and punishments of justice. It is by realizing such truths that any one of us can attain the ideal which Dante wanget to picture forth before us and help us to attain—the ideal of one who in boyhood is gentle, and obedient, and modest; in youth is temperate, resolute and loyal; in fipe years is prudent, just and generous, and who in age has attained to calm wisdom and to perfect peace in God."

The lecture was an agreeable surprise to many in the audience who, remembering Matthew Arnold, anticipated an abstract dis-Matthew Arnold, anticipated an abstract dis-sertation, unintelligibly pronounced. While the lecture abounded in long and complex sentences, they were yet clear, and the sub-ject treated, though biographical, afforded the speaker an opportunity to say what was both pertinent to the theme and applicable to these times. After the lecture the Indianap-olis Literary Club gave the Archdeacon a recention.

but could not be present. The Archdeacon proved himself to be a delightful conversationist, and the breadth of his culture was manifest in all his utterances. At 10 o'clock the elergy of the city called upon Canon Farrar. Among the callers were the Reva. McConnel, Edson, Bradley, Jenckes, Ray-mond, Prentiss, Jeffery, Gilbert, Haines, Van Buskirk, Robinson (colored), Hyde and Gantz.

Van Buskirk, Robinson (colored), Hyde and Gantz.

To a reporter's inquiry as to what impressions he had formed of Indianapolis, Canon Farrar said that his stay here had been tult of pleasant surprises. He spoke of the homelike appearance of the buildings of the city and was surprised at the amount of intelligence displayed by its citizens on literay topics. "I can not account for the fact," he said, "that so many more people in America than in England are well posted on English literature." He was surprised to find so large and well built a city as Indianapolis so far inlead, unassisted by nature except in the way of rich soil. In a ride about the city with Dr. McLeod he was impressed favorably with the American buggy and wondered why that vehicle had not been introduced into England.

At 11 o'clock the Archdeacon took the Big Four train for Cincinnati. At the railway station the conveniences of that wonderful structure did not escape him. An express truckman came bowling along shouting, "Look out, you there." It happened to be Canon Farrar that was in the way, and as passengers apparently, have no rights in the depot and as the Archdeason is not of the church militant, he gracefully yielded his ground and soon took refuge on he train. There is every reason to believe that his visit here was very enjoyable to all concerned. Of his lecture Dr. McLeod says: "It will leave its mark on this community, while probably not a sentence uttered by Matthew Arnold will be remembered. This shows the difference in the reception accorded to a distinguished advocate of Christian doctrine and that given to one who has forsaken Evangelical thought and is preaching mere negatives."

SLOSSON won the first game of the great hilliard tournament at Chicago last night, It will be a close struggle all the way through, and if either of the Americans "down" the Frenchman, it will be as much from good luck as skill.

"A WORD spoken in due season, how good it is!" saith the proverb. Our "Scratch Shot" on the cow nuisance struck home. Of ordinances and amended ordinances there can not be too many, but what we want is the cows kept out of the street day and night. There isn't even a cross-roads village in the whole State of Michigan whose byways are turned into cow pastures as are the streets of the capital city of Indiana.

Some diplomatic statements by the French Prime Minister are said to indicate the collapse of the French enterprises in Tonquin and Madagascar. As France isn't a colonizing nation the net result of her colonial enterprises, as some witty Frenchman said, was to play policeman while the English and Dutch traders did business in peace and without expense. A little less "glory" and a little more sense would be a condition of wealth to France.

THE City Council didn't reach the fortythree-thousand-dollar gift proposition last night. It is to be hoped it will never reach it. It is a thoroughly indefensible proposition in fact and principle. It is against the law and contrary to good morals. It is a sweeping injustice to the people and would open the door to the destruction of the entire sense of responsibility in a public officer, In every way it is demoralizing and should be mmarily rejected.

THE Council very wisely cleared Dr.
Wishard from all prejudice in connection with the recent charges made against him, and he will continue the management of the City Hospital with a renewal of public esteem. The whole episode of the charges and investigation is thoroughly unpleasant and best forgotten. It is natural to wish that such an institution as our City Hospital could be placed out of the reach of selfseekers and spies. But since as a public institution it can't be, the next best thing is to wish that its guardians may never lose their

WHILE there is a general expression of may be confined to the Balkan mountains there is an evident fear that it won't be The English Chanceller of the Excheque says England has no more interest in the contest than any other signatory power of the Berlin treaty, but for all that there is a chance of the Balkan war spreading into a general conflagration. And it is pretty certain that a war on the Danube, or anywhere within the old limits of Turkey in Europe, will make a chance of general war, as long as the: Turk holds his throne of the Bosphorus. Until Turkey is dewoured there will be no certainty of peace among the natives that expect to eat it. Strangely enough, as it seems to us, the London Times thinks the tion more serious for the fact that "Russia is unprepared for war." This, it says, "is the dominant feature of the existing situation." Considering that Russia was buying vessels, mobilizing troops, piling up depots of provisions and other war supplies in anticipation of a deadly struggle with England over the Zulfikar Pass and the road to Herat for months during the negotiations that finally averted it, one is puzzled by this statement of a want of war preparation in a power rarely entirely at peace, and now just out of the most threatening condition it has seen since the Crimean war. But it is to be supposed the London Times knows what it says.

O'BRIEN'S appointment in the New York Custom House of course paralyses the republican organs. The way they wanted to help on good government was to cheer and sneer at the Sterling episode, encourage the democratic spoilsmen and discourage the reform elements. They were bhappy when Sterling was first appointed grave when he was relegated by the President to a civil service examination, hilarious when the rules thereof were suspended so as make eligible all who passed instead of the first four only. Here, now! they screamed this examination is but an elaborate sham: the President has been simply oiling the machine with it; Sterling goes in. Wail, howl, ye magwampa! But lo! now Sterling doesn't go in. Why, then, the rule in this case was suspended seems to us accounted for on the ground of future. The means could be raised on long our speculation concerning it last Friday when it was made, namely "we do not see the significance of the exception which has been made, unless it be to make Sterling's place on the list a matter of official record to the appointing power." That is the only explanation in the light of the event. Most pregnant cause for rejoicing it is to be sure. Never have the upholders of civil service reform had a better right to felicitation than now. O'Brien had been assistant weigher for some years; he is an honorably discharged soldier; he headed the list of applicants, passing ninety-five in the examination. The appointment is ideal in every particular. It will go further and last longer as an object lesson of reform than anything that has been done since the law

MR. GLADSTONE is clearly not disposed to favor present agitation of the question of disestablishing the Church of England. He was prompt to disestablish the Irish Church, ecause it was no part of the national structure. It was a foreign obstruction of native conditions and convictions, no less and no etter. He is willing to do as much for Scotland, for much the same reason. The Irish Church was Protestant where catholicism was dominant, and was therefore the representative of an exceptional feeling and class of society. The Scottish Church is Protestant among Protestants, but represents a class of religious convictions that is strongly antagonized by a class still stronger. In a degree it is like the Irish establishment, a sort of obtrusive and unassailable element in the State and society. Whatever it may have been once, that is its character now. So Mr. Gladstone says in substance in his Edinburgh speech, "the disestablishment of the Scottish Church is a question for the Scotch, and the disestablishment of the English Church is a different affair, that belongs wholly to the English." This looks like some sense and policy over here, where "squatter sovereignty," or the right of every community to regulate its own exclusive affairs, was a popular doctrine when first broached, and has been, in one form or another, ever since the Declaration of Independence. It is likely enough to be distasteful to the radicals of the Chamberlain and Dilke school, who have made a hobby of the disestablishment of the English Church for a long time but it is just as likely to reconcile and draw back to the liberal ranks the "old English" feeling that has for so many generations found expression in the cry of 'Church and King," and that was certainly showing signs of alienation under the apparent ascendancy of the radical sentiment. Disestablishment of the Church and abrogation of hereditary legislation are manifestly questions of time only, and not a very long time. Both the State. Church and the House of Peers are bound "to go," and doubtless Gladstone knows this as well as anybody. But he is not disposed to encourage a movement to force them away. He seems to think it better to wait and "let the pear ripen," as Napoleon used to say. He thinks the movement for disestablishment is premature now, and advises his party to separate in the Scotch Church it the Scotch want it, and let the English Church alone till the English want it. We can't keep thinking that the 'grand old man' has shown all his accustomed sagacity in his Edinburg speech, in spite of the reprobation or slack commenda-

tion of papers that have hitherto warmly The Way of the Viaduct.

That this city need a viaduct is conceded unanimously and with emphasis. But that the railroads need a viaduct quite as badly does not seem to have struck the popular understanding. It would strike it if the railroads were held to their just measure of responsibility and made to bear their just share of the public burdens. Generally in the dealings with railroads the people have taken the buzzard and the railroads the turkey; or the railroads have taken the turkey and people the buzzard, and so it has gone so long that the popular eye sees in it only equity and natural division. The railroads are a great advantage to Indianapolis; there is no doubt of that. But is Indianapolis of no advantage to the railroads? On the other hand there are drawbacks to the advantageous relation of the railroads to the city, one of which is so serious that a viaduct is necessary. Ergo the city must build it! That is the turkey and buzzard trick over again; its constant repetition has a endency to make one tired. We wish it would make the people tired. We wish they would rise to the proper level of the viaduct question and say to the railroads, "It is you that make this viaduct a necessity, and you derive sufficient benefit from the city to share the cost of this viaduct." That is the rrect statement of the case. It is not to be made in a spirit of crimination and recrimiation, like the quarrel in the fable between the Belly and the members. There each alike was needful to the other, and this similar situation should be approached for greement, not disagreement.

It is intolerable that the menace to life and the depreciation of property, which the present condition entails in everincreasing extent, should continue. With our sparse population and wide thoroughfares, it has been endurable longer than it otherwise would. It has reached a point where there must be alleviation, and one viaduct is small alleviation. There should be many; the more, the better. This improvement should be undertaken, not in the spirit of a temporary relief, but in that of permanent change—the creation of new conditions. To this end viaducts on all streets should be contemplated as parts of a system which should begin with the lowering of all the tracks. The "Big Four" Road should enter the city on the bed now occupied by the "Pan Handle;" the "Bee Line." "Wabash," et al. should also, for the matter of that. The exits should all be through a main channel west, corresponding to the way of the Vandalia, until the river is crossed. And then this whole way should be dug down eight or ten feet below its present level. Over each street viaducts could be placed of a few feet rise, and thus the city would be no longer cut in twain, as it is now; the depreciation of its property values would cease, safety to life and convenience of living would be given. and the vexed question would be settled forever in all probability. It would be of direct advantage to the railways also, in giving them greater freedom as to beed, and would solve the problem of room for a new Union Passenger Station. When that golden age is reached and we shall have a new station, the ten-foot depression would make room sufficient in the basement of the outlines of the present structure for trains while over-head would be ample room for all uses. This scheme is a costly one; but not too costly for the great and permanent benefits it would confer, nor too great for a city to undertake that builds for the time bonds, payment of which should equitably fall on the railroads and the city, and Several gentlemen were talking in a sa-loon about absent-minded people. Gilhooly said he thought that old Professor Snore, of the University of Texas, was the most absent-minded man in the business. A Russian woman of rank and riches, dying, left to Gypsy, her pet dog, a legacy of 1,000 roubles ($600), the interest upon which sum was to be spent for the dog's maintenance. Whether too many creature-comforts hastened Gypsy's death, or grief caused him to pine away, is not clear; anyhow Gypsy died. Thereupon the person who had charge of Gypsy took it for granted that she would be paid the pile of roubles; but the owner of another dog, which was an offspring of Gypsy, has put in a claim for the money, on the ground that Gypsy's son is Gypsy's heir. This was the beginning of Conkling's souring on Platt, and not long after they were both sent back to private life the quarrel culminated in a terrible exhibition of inde-pendence by Mrs. Platt, who had taken Lord Conkling's seat at the dining table of the Fifth Avenue Hotel. My Lord came in, the Fifth Avenue Hotel. My Lord came in, still the greatest man in the country or the constellations, and the table was full. Mrs. Platt looked up and said she was sorry there was not a seat for Conkling. His soul burst within his skin when he reflected that she was sitting in his seat, that no man, much less any woman, could ever fill. They parted like little Sunday-school boys who had quarreled over a blue ticket.—[Gath.

In his recent talk to the Yale Kent Club Professor Sumner said that no State should be compelled to educate the children of its citizens. "And no man should marry," he continued, "unless he can afford to support and educate his possible children. People talk about the rights of the parent and the duty of the child, but I tell you that a man who is the cause of his child's existence owe the child everything instead of being owed everything by the child. Birth is a dire misfortune for many children, and their parents can not do enough for them in return for the inherited diseases and misfortunes which they bestow upon them. One of these duties is education, and no man should marry who can not carry this out."

Rev. Sam Jones whoops up the boys sometimes, and rakes them terribly about their gambling and drinking frolies. "Oh, I've been all along there, boys. I know all about it, and I used to go to balls, and dance, too, boys. But when I wanted to get married, when I wanted to settle down with a good wife, I quit drinking and gambling, and I didn't go to a ball-room to get my wite, but I went to a prayer-meeting, and I got a good one." He told this in Teras, and when he returned to his boarding house his landlady, who had heard his remarks, said: "I don't blame you, Brother Jones, but poor Sister Jones, where did she go to get her husband?" They say this is the only time he has been floored since he quit drinking.—[Vicksburg Herald.

A. T. Stewart's Sunday dinners are the subjects of a series of articles by an old-time New Yorker, who in his old age runs to gossip of days lang syne: At one dinner a little episode occurred which cost the man who made a somewhat pointed remark about $50,000. An English banker was invited by Stewart to his tables, and the millionaire poured out the blue seal. The Englishman quaffed down what there was of it at a gulp, in a careless manner, quite at contrast with the solemn style in which Stewart had poured it out. "Ah, you have tasted this wine before," remarked the somewhat chagrined American merchant. "Oh, yea," replied the English banker, "and in larger glasses." Stewart smiled faintly at the somewhat brasque remark, but that Englishman did not smile when Stewart dropped negotiations with his banking-house then pending and transferred his favors to a rival London house.

MAX O'RELL. The Gitted Frenchman Who Has Criti-

When, two or three seasons ago, that oright and clever book, "John Bull et son Ile" took London by surprise and set every one talking on both sides of the Channel, the general cry naturally was, "Who's Max O'Rell?" Only those "in the know" were aware that the amusing writer who had jumped into popularity at a single bound was French master in St. Paul's School and London correspondent to a Parisian journal. There was something so fresh and piquant about the book, and despite the light and bantering tone in which it was written, so much in t that Englishmen knew to be true, if somewhat uncomplimentary, that it had a tremendous sale and was speedily translated, not only into every European language, but into Bengalee.

Next year came "Les Filles de John Bull." which was nearly as successful as its prede cessor, and quite as amusing; and only recently M O'Rell's third volume "Le Chers Voisins," the most serious, and per haps the most valuable of the three, was published. M. O'Rell does not think it probable that he will write again on England. He may be satisfied in knowing, however, that his three books have done a vast deal to remove many of the absurd prejudices which have for so long existed between the two countries, and that they have contributed largely in making the "dear neighbors" better acquainted with one an

M. Max O'Rell is a native of Brittany and was born in 1848. He served with distinction for some years as an artillery officer in the French army, and was pensioned after the Franco-Prussian war, during which he was severely wounded. Coming to London in 1872, M. O'Rell soon obtained a mastership at St. Paul's School, where he remained for nine years. The ovation he received when, on his last speech-day, his resignation was announced, proved him to be not only a most successful teacher but a great favorite among his pupils.

M. O'Rell has also had a very satisfactory experience as a lecturer; indeed, he was so well received at Forquay and Glasgow that he anticipates starting on a lecturing tour of the United Kingdom in the early part of next year. Personally a genial and polished man of the world, M. O'Rell makes friends wherever he goes.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Mr. Wishard Exonerated-Routine Busi ness and Contracts Awarded.

Contrary to expectation, the Pattison proposition did not come up at the meet ng of the Council last night. The City Engineer reported that the cost of straightening and deepening Pogue's Run from Catherine street to the river would be $86,778. The bond of Michael F. Shields, city clerk-elect, in the sum of $5,000 was approved, with John E. Sullivan, James Renihan and James McHugh as sureties The City Attorney recommended an immediate repair of the grade of Washington street between Illinois and Delaware, on the ground that there were numerous accidents there, caused by a too heavy pitch. The City Hos pital committee reported that they had thoroughly investigated the charges against Superintendent Wishard, having held twenty sessions and examined fifty-seven witnesses, and they found that the evidence did not sustain the charges made. They also asked to be discharged from further consideration of the charge of bribery against Dr. Ridpath, which was granted. The committee on bridges recommended the awarding of the contract for painting various bridges to Richter & Twiname, J. R. Miller and John Egger. The following ordinances were passed: Giv-ing the Electric Lighting, Gas Heating and Illuminating Company the privilege of erecting towers and masts in the streets; granting Acme Milling Company the right to lay a double track across Blackford street; granting permission to the Bec Line Company to run a switch across Middle street; to gravel River street from Kentucky avenue to White-river bridge; the first alley east of East street from Buchanan to the first east of East street from Buchanan to the first alley south of Coburn street; pave Fayette street between First and Second; improve second alley south of South street, from Tennessee to Eddy street; improve West street from McCarty to Morris street; improve Park avenue, from Eight street to Ninth; im-prove the sidewalk on McCarty street, be-tween Tennessee and Maple; improve the east walk of Shelby street, from the first alley south of Prospect street to Pogue's Run: alley south of Prospect street to Pogue's Run; pave Blackford street, from Michigan to Vermont; improve first alley west of East Merrill to Stevens Place street; improve first alley north of Pratt street, from Illinois to first alley north; paving north walk of North street, from Mississippi to West street; pave walks on John street, between Massachusetts avenue and Hanna street; pave Grant street, vest of West street, 545 feet.

Frank P. Walker and others presented a ommunication claiming that the city was indebted to them one hundred dollars for each engine house, in which the Seibert patent ap-paratus for opening doors, etc., was used and this was referred to the judiciary committee.

Play Fairly. Some days ago there was an item, whether authorized or not, in effect that the friends of City Clerk Bruenig contemplated bringing him out as a republican candidate for county auditor. This seems to have stirred up a choice coterie of statesmen who imagine they have a lien upon this office, and there is a whisper to the mind-reader of The News a whisper to the mind-reader of The News that an intimation has gone to Bruenig's friends suggesting that he give his attention to the recordership, and leave the other race to the candidates who have been grooming therefor for several months. Per contra, it is suggested that several candidates have been grooming for the recordership for a longer or shorter time, and if there is to be a receze-out the frost will settle as well on the office of auditor as across the hall. There is no reason why there should not be a fair field and no favors in one as well as the

A sign in a down-town street near the postoffice caught my eye the other day, because of the conundrum it presented—"Anti-Curl Association." I asked a gentleman in the Association." I asked a gentleman in the same building what it meant and he told me that it had puzzled the neighborhood for a long time. The "association," which is composed of white men, prepares a liquid which is supposed to take the curl and kink out of a negro's hair. Its posters and wrappers contain pictures of a darky with kinky wool "before" applying the remedy, and the same gentleman of color with smooth, sleek hair "after" using it. So when every man forged his occupation into a family name, Smith at once became prominent, and, as there were thousands of Johns and multithere were thousands of Johns and multi-tudes of smiters or smith—ergo, John Smith.

Thus much progress had been made when the Pea Green grocer sent in his collector, who declared that a John Smith had bought and failed to pay for goods at the following rates: Concord grapes, 10c per pound—75c per ten-pound basket; bananas, 15@30c a dozen; cranberries, 10@124c a quart; Irish potatoes, 60c a bushel; Jersey sweets (going higher), 40c a peck; eggs, 23c a dozen; but-

Every man who has a turkey to sell is holding it for Thanksgiving. He thus throws away money. Now there is a great scarcity and turkeys retail, dressed, at 170 a pound. In less than ten days, if the usual thing occurs, the prices will drop because of the heavy supply. Chickens, in the meantime, have already begun to decline. Today they sell at 16c.

There is a great abundance and variety of game and fish in market. Of ducks there are mallards, at 75c a pair, dressed; teal, 60c; wood, 50c; quail, $3 a dozen; patridges, $1 a pair; prairie chickens, $1; blackbirds, 75c a dozen; venison, 25c a pound. In the fish bly adjourned.

Louis Riel Quartered in This City.

Louis Riel, executed by the Canadian Government yesterday at Regina, during September, October and November, 1875, boarded with the family of Joseph Hickey, 30 Grant street, this city, after the original Manitobian insurrection he feeling it safer to seclude himself in the States and accidentally drifting to Indianapolis. He made the acquaintance of Hickey while stopping at the Sherman House, the latter being a friend the Sherman House, the latter being a friend of Riel's uncle, who lived in Minnesota. Mr. Hiokey says that Riel was a devout Catholic, and a monomaniac, if not insane. His time was spent in reading and discussing religious matters, and he carried a crucifix in an inner pocket, which he frequently spoke of as a weapon protecting him from danger, He often spent hours after nightfall walking up and down the pavement fronting the house, seemingly in deep meditation, and while attending church regularly in the morning, he rarely went up deep meditation, and while attending church regularly in the morning, he rarely went up town and never visited a place of amusement or a saloon. He was then thirty-two years old, unmarried, with smooth foatures and intellectual appearance, and his bearing indicating that he had been carefully reared and well educated. He was in receipt of many letters daily and was always well dressed and never lacking for mony. He frequently and never lacking for mony. He frequently said he was going back to Manitobs, from which purpose he could not be persuaded, and often said that the Canadian Government was unjust and oppressive in its treat-ment of settlers in the disputed territory. Mr. Hickey states that Riel was not a halfbreed, his ancestors being Canadian French, and that nothing could have shaken his faith in Catholicism, English papers to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Lights in the State House, There are to be 4,500 electric lights of sixteen candle power each, and 4,500 gas lights in the new State House, and a gas light and an electric light will be put in every globe and an equal number of each in every chandelier, so that if one fails the other can be used, and if an occasion of special splendor comes along both can be used together. What a superb illumination 9,000 electric and gas lights will make in that magnificent structure, which is now so far advanced as to enable one to get a pretty good idea of it when completed. It is well worth a visit, as unhandy as some of the passages about it are. The Charity Ball. The sale of tickets for the Charity Ball at English's Opera House to-morrow night is progressing very satisfactorily, and the indications are that there will be a large attendance. The temporary floor over the parquet was put down yesterday and the boxes are now in course of erection. There will be no reserved seats, and those who desire to look on merely will be seated in the family circle and gallery, the parquet circle chairs being reserved for the dancers. Tickets are on sale at the box office of the theater and at the Denison. About two hundred out-of-town people are expected to be in attendance.

CITIZEN JOHN SMITH.

And Why He Is So Numerous—Also, What If Costs Him to Live.

No wonder there was a rushing together of men at the Court House this morning. The watchman in the tower thought that a murder had occurred, or the owner of a gate-opening cow had been knocked out with a siung-shot, or the idiot who throws banana peel on the sidewalk had butted his own brains (brains, forsooth) out in a fall, or a devil-sling shooter had lost an eye. But they were dead wrong. A court bailiff had simply said: "John Smith, John Smith! O, John Smith, come into court, come into court."

Now a regiment could beenlisted from the J. Smiths who pay taxes at the Court House, There were several platoons of them within hearing when the bailiff lifted up his mournful voice. They responded to a man, and in such haste that in "getting there" "Hare Ben Johnson" (three hundred Johnsons in the directory) was assaulted and battered in the very presence of the Goddess of Justice and all of the little god-desses freecoed on the Court House wall, The bailiff assorted the respondent into big and little, old and young, but was unable to determine which John Smith he wanted. So the Smiths went into convention. Authorities were cited, and the John Smith pediaries, the state of the state of the way of the state of WILLIAM BASCOM, of Duluth, was a laboring man, who, in the flush of his power, was re-garded as a prodigy of strength. One day, while lifting a heavy stone, he strained the muscles of his back, and it seemed certain that he would be mable to do any hard manual labor from that time forth. For weeks he was confined to the house, while his family suffe ed for lack of their usual comforts. He improved up to a certain stage, but then came to a stand-still. He could not gain strength. One day he was urged to try Fishler's Hero Bitters. He did so, and with the happiest results. He is again a strong, healthy man, fully able to accomplish a day's work. DR. GALLOWAY'S

ST. LOUIS. DIED. STEWART-MAGGIE J., wife of A. J. Stewart and daughter of M. J. Kennedy, November 17, 1885. Funeral to-morrow at 2 o'clock, from residence, 112 North Mississippi street.

Over the river, the deep dark river, Came a messenger grim Came a messenger grim,

And summoned our Maggie, our gentle Maggie,
To hasten and go with him.
On her breast we folded her snowy hands,
And she lay so still and white:
And he bore her over the turbid stream,
To the far off realms of light.

Oh! there's a beautiful, beautiful land,
Beyond the flowing river—
Where streams of perpetual blissfulness, Flow on and on forever.
And Maggle, our darling Maggle, has gone
To that blessed, blessed land.
While on theyerge of the fathomless stream
With tear-blinded eyes we stand.

Oh! yes, we weep, though we know she is freed From pain and sorrows of earth; We weep for the sweet loved voice that we'll hear No more 'round our family hearth. We all must cross o'er the mystic stream Before we enter the land Where the fragrant flowers of joy and love In fadeless beauty expand.

By and by a voice will call, and a hand
Will beckon us over the river—
In the unseen world, where parting and tears
Are known no more forever.
Oh! a happy land is the realm of light,
And our Maggie is gone before.
To welcome us after a little while,
On its ever transquil shore. To welcome us after a little On its ever tranquil shore. FUNERAL NOTICE.

Woman Against Woman" - Coming Events.

Only a moderate house greeted Effie Ellsler last night at the Grand. The play, "Woman against Woman," is original only in the deft handling of the old ingredients of the emo-tional drama and the emphasis given to the peculiarity indicated by the title. The leading part in the hands of Miss Ellsler is somdramatic instincts and a womanly nature at every point. John Tressider, in the hands, of Mr. Frank Weston, was well done, and the company as a whole is strong and well balanced. The characters of Bachal Westwood and Culbert Craven were all the more repulsive for being true to life. The piece will run two more nights and a matinee

Lawrence Barrett's season, which begins on Thursday night, is noted no less for comedy than tragedy. His especial excellence in the former, to which he has unbended this year more frequently than before, has been acknowledged by the testimony of crowded houses and the glad acclaim of critics everywhere. He has been so long identified with more serious roles, that few, possibly, are aware of the delightful effects he achieves in the lighter modes which are portrayed in "The King's Pleasure" and "The Wonder." The former is a poetic creation of most airy The former is a poetic creation of most airy fancy, an adaptation from the French, telling the fortunes of a ragged, starving, stroiling poet, who escapes death at the hands of the cruel Louis XI by winning the love of a rich neighbor's daughter. It is one of the sweetest, most pathetic and delicate of delineations, a favorite with famous Coquelin, of the Theater Francaise. "The Wonder" is well known as among the best high-class comedies, in which situation and action follow swiftly from first to last in the changing story of love, jealousy and intrigue.

Death of Dr. Wiley. Dr. Delaney Wiley, a well known physician, died last night at his residence on Chris tian avenue. He was the son of Rev. Allen Wiley, one of the pioneer Methodist minis ters of this part of the country, and was born in Switzerland county in 1815. He was en-gaged in mercantile pursuits until 1840, when he began the study of medicine and commenced the practice at Jeffersonville in 1845 menced the practice at Jeffersonville in 1845, where he remained until 1861, when he removed to this city, where he continued the practice up to the time of his death. He was a member of the Tippecanoe Cub and on last Wednesday evening attended the reception at Senator Harrison's. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Elizabeth K. Lindley, of Vevay, and his second, Miss Matilda A. Tomliu, of Jeffersonville.

Foolish Virgins. It is told a News reporter that in one particular quarter of the city, nearly all sheltered under the same root, are seven young girls, the majority of them sixteen or eventeen years of age, and all living under ssumed names. In nearly every instance assumed names. In nearly every instance they are runaways from home, in several instances because of objecting to parental control, and perhaps encouraged by the delusion that they can successfully make their way unaided and alone. Whether acquaintances previous to their flight from home or not, they seem to have herded together under a common impulse. If they once see the world as others see it, the fact that "there is no place like home" will impress itself upon these foolish virgins in a way never to be forgotten.

The Presbyterian Preachers The Presbyterian ministers of the city, in meeting yesterday, discussed the ques-tion of denominationalism. Rev. Samue Sawyer, of Thorntown, asked and answered Sawyer, of Thorntown, asked and answered the question, "Why are the churches divided into denominations?" Those present for the most part regarded denominationalism as a good thing. Thanksgiving services, it was decided, will be held at the First Church, Rev. R. V. Hunter preaching the sermon. Some of the Presbyterian congregations will also unite with Mayflower Congregational Church, where the pastor, Rev. N. A. Hyde, will preach a Thanksgiving sermon.

PRICE, OF GAS

Notice to Gas Consumers and Others. Your attention is called to the marked reduction in the price of gas, which took effect on the 1st day of March. The company is now furnishing gas to all consumers at $1.90 per 1,000 cubic feet. This price is certainly within the reach of all, for both lighting and cooking purposes. The convenience and comfort of cooking by gas, especially during the summer months, where a fire is not otherwise required, can only be thoroughly appreciated by those who have had experience in its useful application for that purpose. The company has sold for use in this city, during the last four years, a large number of gas stoves, and is satisfied, from the many testimonials from its patrons, that these stoves "fill a long felt want." all, for both lighting and cooking purposes.
